Seabees

A log road is made through the jungle mud on Rendova Island. Coconut palms felled along the route served as a ready supply of road building material. Heavy artillery of the Marines was carried over this road to a point where it was in range of the Jap stronghold at Munda.

The History of the Seabees

Aside from their motto—"Construimus Batuimus" (We build, we fight)—there is nothing classical about the Seabees. This newest branch of the Navy, the Seabees—262,000 strong—is composed of the toughest, most resourceful and energetic bunch of builders, dockwallopers, repair men, and anti-boobytrap operators this war has seen. As such, the Seabees are something of an anomaly in the ceremonies and traditions of the Navy.

But old traditions are somewhat foreign to this outfit of horny-handed, cussing, gun-toting construction workers. Not young themselves—their average age is around 28—the Seabees have built a lusty new tradition of their own. "Can Do" is the Seabee watch word from the Arctic wastes of the Aleutians to the steaming jungles of the southwest Pacific, from the central Pacific to the Atlantic.

A Seabee and his heavy bomber (bulldozer) at work in a South Pacific jungle. Notice the fallen coconuts.

Equipped to work AND fight, this Seabee leads the disembarking procession down the gangplank on the arrival of a transport at a South Pacific port.

This war's two-ocean Navy and its air arm are impotent without their global girdle of bases, and an island remains useless until it has been transformed into a base. Without the back-breaking work of the Seabees, there would be fewer front-page stories of Jap flotillas or aircraft sent to watery graves. Never has any Navy been called on to scramble from island to island to set up advance base after advance base with which to attack the enemy; for a large-scale attack is impossible unless there are well-equipped suitable bases from which to operate.

Incidentally, the Seabees, too, have their heroes. The name of Aurelio Tassone is largely unknown, yet this 28-year-old ex-state-road bulldozer operator performed one of the most ingenious heroic feats of the war. During the Treasury Island landings in the Solomons, he roared down the ramp of an LST in his 20-ton bulldozer to attack Jap snipers in a coconut-log pillbox. Using the steel blade of the bulldozer as a shield, he charged the pillbox, dropping the blade when he was virtually upon the Japs. The bulldozer literally swept the pillbox from its foundations and buried the 12 Japs in the debris. There are many other such stories.

The Navy learned many lessons at Wake, Bataan, Corregidor, and Guam, among them that unarmed civilian construction workers, though willing, could not be expected to pitch in and defend what they built. As an outcome, the first Seabee regiment, consisting of some 3,300 officers and men, was authorized on December 28, 1941.

Navy ratings were offered to skilled construction workers to give up highly paid civilian jobs and volunteer for service with the Seabees. From the ranks of 59 different building trades, men began to answer the call—veterans of the last war eager to get their licks in, men with large families eager to do their bit, blacksmiths, crane operators, plumbers, oilers, electricians, welders.

Before long, because the volunteers included many men in their forties (the age limits were set at 17 to 50), the Navy began to call the Seabees "Grandpops." However, events have shown that those "grandpops" had the stuff and are one of the best parts of the Navy.

were available for the first Seabees, because the program was organized so quickly. The first Seabees were sent overseas under-equipped. Typical of the early phases of the war when the whole country was so unprepared, these men of the construction battalions called themselves "confused bastards." By the spring of 1942, however, Seabee training camps were being set up.

For the past year or so, the Seabee "boot" has been given eight to 12 weeks of intensive training. He has learned close and extended order drill like an infantryman. He has learned to run a hellish obstacle course complete with pyramids, water hazards, dugouts, gun emplacements. He has learned marksmanship and use of the bayonet.

Parks and the other Seabee camps are equipped with schools for nearly every building skill. In the machine shop the Seabee learns how to do repair work which will fall to him overseas. He becomes familiar with the types of bulldozers he will operate in clearing an airplane landing strip or a barracks site. He has met his versatile all-purpose mechano set, the pontoon gear.

into five different types of units in which exist a high degree of specialization and jack-of-all-trade versatility. The first is the Seabee construction battalion, totalling 1,080 men and 32 officers. Within this battalion are super-specialists with each man sifted in training into the niche for which he is best fitted; there is no such thing as a Seabee company made up only of iron workers, or carpenters, or bulldozer operators. While each gang has its specific work to perform the Seabee scheme necessitates that all turn to and serve as helpers to any other trade. When there is a wood barracks to be built, the iron workers, the steam fitters, and the electricians lend a hand to the carpenters who lead the show. Similarly, if the job is in metals, the carpenters pass the tools and take orders from the metal workers. This diversification has been largely responsible for making each Seabee battalion into a versatile, closely-knit team capable of performing construction miracles.

The second type of Seabee unit is the "specialist battalion"—a euphemistic name for the Seabee stevedores who have done so much to relieve the cargo loading and unloading bottleneck which threatened logistics earlier in the war. Each special battalion consists of 1,010 men and 34 officers, most of them "dockwallopers" who've learned to call themselves logisticians.

Not many months ago, freighters were being lost only a few hundred yards from their destination, waiting their turn to be unloaded by civilians or untrained members of the combat services.

Trees and logs are put in place by Marines and Seabees for a bridge across a jungle stream on New Britain Island.

Ships tied up for days, even weeks, were perfect targets for enemy attack. This situation was relieved only by the arrival of hook-slinging Seabee specials, who on one recent occasion handled 31 ships with a total of 61,891 tons of freight in the remarkable time of 23 days. Today Seabee specials are getting ships unloaded and turned around days ahead of old schedules.

The third type of unit is the Seabee maintenance unit. Today, when a construction battalion has completed the work of building a base, it is generally relieved by a maintenance unit. A battalion in miniature of 275 men and officers, the maintenance units defend what their mates have built, repair and improve and where necessary finish left-over projects.

The fourth type of unit is little known but extremely important—the Seabee Marine detachment. In order to release fighting Marines on a hazardous landing from the specialized job of running equipment ashore, a Seabee Marine detachment is attached to each Marine division. These Seabees wear Marine uniforms, and as an integral part of the Marines in landing and fighting operations, they not only do the regular job of a construction battalion, but form important Marine combat units as well.

The fifth type of unit, the demolition unit, handles the man-killing job of destroying obstructions and traps placed to hinder beach landings. These units, made up of one officer and four men each, many of them former "hard rock men," have undergone a special toughening-up. They have been coached in the uses of dynamite. They have been taught how to destroy bridges, mine fields, roads, barbed wire entanglements and docks. They have learned to lay mine fields and booby traps and how to detect and dismantle the enemy's. They work on the land but they also work under sea.

A Seabee goes to work on Tarawa after the Marines had wrested it, with much bloodshed, from the Japs.

Before the first assault wave lands, Seabee demolition units are at work, often in the dead of night, unearthing from the sea near the beach "horn scullies," those upended and sharpened rails placed in V formation which can rip the bottom out of an LCT.

The demolition units know how to clear the harbors choked with our own and enemy debris. Because they know how to use explosives under water, the demolition of a sunken ship is a comparatively simple job for them. They are also skilled in placing explosives alongside a grounded ship in such a way that the suction which holds it is broken, thus enabling tugs to extricate it.

The Seabee's Island X is everywhere, from Iceland to Asia. But a list of X's tells nothing of the obstacles overcome and the skill and ingenuity shown by the fighting Seabees. At Attu and Kiska, the Seabees were among the first to land. There they swung from ropes in a driving rain to chisel footholes in the solid rock of steep cliffs in order to construct a tract for a traveling carriage. Before the last assault boat had landed, the Seabees were at work replacing poorly constructed Jap installations. In the teeth of gales, bottomless tundra, sleet, snow, and fantastic williwaw storms, they hacked landing strips out of solid rock in record time. Swampy tundra gave way to smooth hard roads. Seabees dove into icy waters to erect wharves and docks. They worked in short spurts in water up to 108 feet deep, and so cold that hose carrying air to them frequently froze. For many Seabees, there was never a three-day period when they were not in the bone-chilling water.

Seabee battalions have been in with the assault waves on almost every amphibious operation in the South Pacific. They attack the job of hacking airfields out of the island jungles with assurance. Often these airfields were completed in days instead of weeks. On Munda, for example, the bomb-ravaged Jap field was put into usable condition in eight days. On Tarawa, the airstrip which hours before had been a major threat to the U. S. position in the Pacific, was put into shape for U. S. planes by the time the last Jap had been exterminated.

A little difficulty is encountered in the building of a jungle road. But the Seabees soon had everything under control.

In other theatres of the war, the Seabees have been equally active. They were the first American detachment to land in Africa. They were in the first wave at Casablanca. As the U. S. and British forces rolled eastward, the Seabees rolled with them. The Seabee demolition units were out in front blasting barbed wire entanglements, locating and detonating booby traps and land mines. They built housing and hospital facilities. Water supply and purification were also in their hands.

Seabees were in the vanguard at Sicily and at Salerno. With the invasion forces under a hell of fire from the shore batteries, enemy bombers, and tiger tanks which blasted men and equipment to bits on every side, the Seabees unloaded thousands of pieces of equipment, cleared space for dressing stations, blasted barbed wire entanglements and took part in the fight. Within two days they had turned the bloody beach of Salerno into a temporary base of operations.

Seabees landed in France with the first of the assault forces.

Seabees have improvised materials, tools, and parts wherever they have been stationed. Mahogany and teakwood have been used to build the humblest sheds and shelters. Coke bottles have been used as insulators when a power line had to be extended. Empty gasoline drums have been drafted for a variety of uses—roofing, shoring, drainage systems, shower baths, culverts, ovens, grills, trusses, baffles, piping, and even canoes.

In the midst of a world dedicated to destruction, the Seabees are busy building, repairing, salvaging, and fighting to maintain what they have wrested from the jungle and the waste. When victory comes, we believe that it will be in no small part due to the achievements of the fighting Seabees.

CAMP PARKS, SHOEMAKER, CALIFORNIA

To all hands:

In a period of less than three years, the Seabees have built a proud name and a fighting tradition. They have thrived on the difficult and refused to acknowledge the impossible. Wherever they have gone, they have adapted, improvised, and accomplished. They have built, fought, bled, and died. They have made American craftsmanship and ingenuity a living legend in the far corners of the world.

As one of the principal Seabee bases, Camp Parks has played an important part in the evolution of this new branch of the service. At Camp Parks, we have all tried to keep clearly in mind the two-fold intent expressed in the Seabee motto: "We build—we fight!" Our program has been conceived with an active regard for the full significance of that motto. It is an ambitious program and one which requires men of a high caliber, both as students and instructors. As your Civil Engineer Officer in Command, I am proud to say that the men of Camp Parks are now, and have been from the beginning, that kind of men. It has been a privilege to hold a position of responsibility among you.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF CAMP PARKS

Commissioned about two years ago, Camp Parks—the Seabee Battalion Replacement Depot near Shoemaker—has grown from a vast muddy expanse into a huge Naval training and replacement center and has taken its place as a vital unit in the Navy's Seabee program. Captain James D. Wilson is Civil Engineer Officer in Command of Camp Parks.

In January, 1943, Camp Parks was commissioned before a complement of 150 men and a handful of officers. Since then, about 90,000 officers and men have been trained and assigned to duty. Today—on its huge paved parade ground—Camp Parks can muster more than 20,000 men and hundreds of officers.

The physical properties of the camp have grown from the original four buildings to a size comparable with a modern small city. Nearly sixty barracks and more than 1,000 Quonset huts house the enlisted personnel. A large group of administration buildings command the parade grounds while sprawled over the rolling acres are a dispensary with hospital facilities, recreation centers, picture shows, bowling alleys, swimming pools, chapels, libraries, officers' quarters, classrooms, a hostess house for enlisted men and their guests, refrigeration plants, bakeries, warehouses, and the like. The outdoor facilities include a rifle range, a Commando course, and grounds for baseball, football, and other games.

Hard-surfaced roads interlace the camp from end to end and bus service is provided thereon to facilitate movements within the camp.

During the past year and a half, Camp Parks has received thousands of men direct from the battlefields abroad. These are the men—skilled in the arts of peace and the latest science of destruction—that form the newest arm in the nation's first line of offense—the Navy Seabees. Behind these Seabees is a thrilling chapter of achievement under fire in the red tumult of war. The recent bloody encounters at numerous beachheads have added throbbing passages to the story. At Camp Parks are the men responsible for the glowing tradition that has already grown about this stripling—but stalwart—Seabee organization. They came from the remote islands of the South Seas where they tore out jungles and built the bases that assured victory in the Coral Sea battle. They came from Guadalcanal where they rode their bulldozers in building roads and airfields during the thick of the fighting. They came from Guam, Saipan, Bougainville—from wherever the fighting took place. They came from the Aleutians where they had moved in with the assault forces on Attu and Kiska. They have returned for a short visit home, training and reassignment—these men from remote corners of the world who were but lately from the farms, the factories, the arts, the sciences, and the whole broad expanse of America.

Easing up a bit on the benches between shots, the men swap a few yarns.

After the firing is over, guns are thoroughly cleaned. The Seabee is proud of his rifle and keeps it in first-class trim.

Another form of firing practice valuable to the Seabee on foreign soil is the mortar set-up assimilating fire.

The alleys are in excellent condition for hookballers. This one looks like "timber" is about to fall.

A popular sport with Seabees at Camp Parks is softball. In the picture shown below the catcher's mitt is empty and the batter's heavy swing is spent.
